

GOP Convention, 'Biggest Show On Earth', Due Monday

PHILADELPHIA, June 14—Mark Hanna, one of America's most astute politicians at the end of the last century, once described the Republican and Democratic presidential nominating conventions held in the USA every four years as the "biggest shows on earth."

Hanna had a point. The conventions have no parallel for color, drama and pageantry. There are bands and flags, and numerous—and blatant—demonstrations by state delegations for the various candidates.

The conventions are the payoff for four long years of patient—and often laborious—work by the party adherents in the local, state and biennial congressional elections. It is an effectively eloquent way for the party leaders to give collective thanks to the "faithful boys back home."

That is why the conventions are immense. The Republicans will bring about 1,100 delegates to Philadelphia next Monday. The Democrats will seat 1,234 delegates at their convention in the same city on July 12.

Both conventions will last about five days, barring some totally untoward developments in the balloting for the presidential and vice-presidential nominees.

The delegates to the convention are chosen in many ways. Most states use the "primary" system of committing delegates to a candidate—as exemplified by the recent primaries in Ohio, Nebraska and Oregon.

Some of the states convene special conventions to select delegates to the national body, while the state "central committee" in one or two states chooses the delegation.

The apportionment of seats differs appreciably in the Democratic and Republican conventions. In general this is the way seats are assigned:

1. Republican convention: One delegate from each congressional district; one additional delegate from each congressional district which casts at least 10,000 Republican votes for President or congressman in the preceding election. The total number of congressional districts totals 435—i.e., equal to the total number of seats in the House of Representatives. The Republicans also give three "bonus" delegates for any states that "went Republican" in the preceding presidential election.

2. Democratic convention: Two delegates for each congressional district; two "bonus" delegates for any state that "went Democratic" in the preceding presidential election.

Committees on protocol, en-

The order of business in both conventions is alike. The temporary chairman opens the convention. The "keynote" speech then is delivered by one of the better party orators.

This speech normally outlines the achievements of the one party, sharply criticizes the record of the opposition, and fairly much points the way to what the "platform" will include.

Committees on protocol, entainment, etc., then are elected. Probably one of the most important single committees is the committee on credentials, whose job it is to allot contested seats.

Often the distribution of these seats can change the balance of power among the various elements of the party on the convention floor.

Injunction Orders Sea Strike Halt

80-Day Cool Off Directed By U.S.

NEW YORK, June 14—A federal district court judge issued an injunction here today to block a threatened nationwide strike by 150,000 maritime workers at midnight tomorrow.

Federal Judge John W. Clancy acted on a petition presented by the U. S. attorney general's office.

The injunction, which prohibits a walkout of seamen and dock workers, also restrains 54 shipping companies on the east coast from locking out the unions and orders both sides to "bargain in good faith" in an effort to resolve the dispute.

Similar injunction applications will be sought in San Francisco and Cleveland under provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act, which provides for an "80-day cooling off" period.

NEW YORK City is the focal point of a "centralized operation" ordered by U. S. Attorney General Tom Clark at the direction of President Truman.

Whether the seven unions representing the 150,000 seamen who have been alerted for a strike will comply with the federal injunction is not clear.

Joseph Curran, president of the CIO National Maritime union, said his union did "not intend to defy the law."

Ferdinand P. Smith, secretary of NMU, issued a de-

CHILLICOTHE, June 14—Ross County voters will be asked to ballot in November on a proposed tax levy for tuberculosis treatment funds.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Mr. Truman's position is becoming much clearer. Obviously he is curbing unruly congressmen and rivers.

While he did not indict Republicans by name for the Spring floods, he has made it clear that no Democrats were involved.

Incidentally the Republican campaign song "Date In '48" is coming off the presses. If anything goes wrong it will be re-issued as "We're Surely Due In '52." Democrats are torn between "Always" and "We're Just Rolling Along With The Breeze."

But all is not dark for this campaign year. Although our new planes have exceeded the speed of sound, some lucky fellows will be traveling too fast to hear the speeches.

Still a plane which can travel six miles in six seconds is not too remarkable considering the current speed of the current dollar.

U. S. Senate Set To Quit Saturday

Night Session Called; Many Bills Remain For Final Consideration

WASHINGTON, June 14—Acting Majority Leader Wherry, (R) Nebr., announced a night session of the Senate today and predicted flatly that Congress will adjourn Saturday in time for the Republican convention.

The Senate floor leader said that following action late today on the reciprocal trade extension bill, the long-range farm program will be the next order of business.

Wherry said the drive for adjournment then calls for temporarily laying aside the farm bill long enough to pass the interior, government corporations and navy appropriation bills at tonight's special meeting. Tomorrow debate is to begin on the Senate's farm bill.

Sen. Robertson, (D) Va., warned the Senate that the compromise trade bill would lead to "sabotage" of the nation's program of international cooperation.

ROBERTSON said the bill might put the U. S. Tariff Commission "into politics" and lead other countries to believe America is reneging on its commitments.

House acceptance of the modified Senate bill was forecast by Rep. Knutson, (R) Minn., House ways and means committee chairman. But Senate Democrats served notice they will try to substitute a straight one-year extension for the Republican bill (Continued on Page Two)

Dublin Tracker's Injuries Fatal

Pickaway County's traffic death toll climbed to 15 Sunday when Ray Walker, 53, of Dublin, died in White Cross hospital, Columbus, of injuries received Friday on Route 23, three miles south of Circleville.

Walker slipped and fell from the cab of a truck driven by Robert Kirkendall of Columbus and was run over by the rear wheels of the vehicle, Sheriff Charles Radcliff reported.

County traffic authorities, expressing alarm at the 15 fatalities chalked up on Pickaway highways, reported that during all of last year, only seven fatalities were recorded here.

Hospital attaches said Walker died of fractured ribs, punctured lung and internal injuries. Walker received emergency first aid by a Circleville physician and was removed to the hospital in a Deffenbaugh ambulance.

HE IS SURVIVED by his widow, Mrs. Mildred Walker; a daughter, Miss Betty Walker; and a son, Ray Walker, all of Dublin; his mother, Mrs. Lena Walker; a sister, Mrs. Edna Johnson; and a brother, Frank Walker, all of Columbus.

Funeral arrangements are being arranged by the S. E. Corbin and Son funeral home of Worthington.

A-Plant Strike Appears Settled

OAK RIDGE, Tenn., June 14—Tension of a strike threat relaxed today at Oak Ridge as union representatives and operators of the National Atomic Laboratories moved to wrap up a wage agreement with a formal contract.

The agreement was reached yesterday on a wage boost of 15-1/2 cents an hour. The settlement is subject to ratification by the 875 workers represented by the AFL Atomic Trades and Labor Council.

The workers had threatened a strike against the Carbide and Carbon Chemicals Corp. for more than three months in support of wage demands of a 26-cents an hour raise.

CINCINNATI, June 14—Commerce Secretary Charles Sawyer asserted today that America has adopted an "incredible complacency" toward Communism.

Sawyer also told the Advertising Federation of America in his maiden speech as a cabinet member that the nation's natural wealth is running out and "commercial reserves" will be exhausted within a generation.

Sawyer, publicly attacking Russia, said that the nation's attitude toward Communism compares with the "incredible complacency" toward Japan just before Pearl Harbor. He added:

"It is not too hard to be jolted out of complacency by an attack such as we suffered at Pearl Harbor. But it is hard to fight complacency in time of peace. That is exactly what we must do today."

The former Cincinnati lawyer declared that America's best defense against complacency and Communist influences is to match the Russians' "frenzied devotion" with "an opposite devotion—a devotion to the ideals which throughout the years have made us proud to be Americans."

Bankers Prefer Taft As Prexy

WASHINGTON, June 14—Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio, is the Republican whom bankers would like most to see as President.

That's the result of a poll published today by "Washington Banktrends," a weekly which conducted the survey.

Of the six leading Republican candidates, Taft polled 38.5 percent of the votes. Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan got 27.5 percent and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York ranked third with 21.1 percent.

LOS ANGELES, June 14—President Truman promised to "lay it on" Congress again in a speech here today.

The chief executive will switch from foreign policy to a good, old fashioned tub-thumping political address in California's southern metropolis.

Mr. Truman speaks in Los Angeles at 6:15 p. m. (EST) before a Los Angeles Press Club luncheon gathering.

The President has chosen his off-the-cuff technique for the fifth major speech of his cross-country swing.

He will speak from notes, rather than from a prepared text as he did Saturday in Berkeley at the University of California when he denounced Russia's "obstruction and aggression" and branded the Soviet Union as the one major road block in the path of world peace.

Tense Peace Reigns; UN Talks Open

Mediator Checks Trouble Spots

TEL AVIV, June 14—A tense and troubled peace reigned over the Holy Land today.

United Nations observers reported "all quiet on all fronts." On the Aegean Isle of Rhodes, UN Mediator Count Folke Bernadotte hoped to find a permanent settlement of the Arab-Jewish conflict.

But on the fourth day of the truce there was still danger that the warfare would break out anew.

In Jerusalem, U. S. Consul General William C. Burdett, a member of the truce commission, narrowly averted a renewal of hostilities when he persuaded the Arab Legion not to fire on a Jewish convoy.

The convoy, first to arrive in the Holy City in more than seven weeks, brought food badly needed by Jerusalem's 100,000 Jews. It was not checked by the UN truce commission, and Arab-Jewish disputes that arose from its arrival boded no good for the future of the cease-fire agreement.

House Expected To Pass Draft Bill Tomorrow

WASHINGTON, June 14—The House rules committee, breaking a five-week deadlock, today approved a bill to draft men aged 19 through 25 and sent it to the House for action tomorrow.

The action cleared the way for certain House passage of the legislation, which provides for two years of military service for single men, largely non-veterans.

The legislation in effect restores for two years the Selective Service Act which lapsed shortly after the war ended. The House bill is similar to that approved by the Senate last Thursday by a vote of 78 to 10.

House Speaker Martin, (R) Mass., predicts House passage, perhaps in a day. A conference committee of the two houses would then reconcile differences in the legislation before sending it to the White House.

Wallace Backers Pouring Out Big Fund In Drive

WASHINGTON, June 14—Supporters of Henry Wallace's third party bid for presidential election have spent more than either the Democrats or Republicans in campaign expenditures which already have passed the million dollar mark.

This was shown today in reports filed with Congress. The reports indicate a record mark in expenditures of funds by four major political groups to elect a President.

Altogether the Republicans, Democrats, Wallacites and the CIO Political Action Committee have spent $1,190,601 in the first five months of this year to promote presidential candidates.

Wallace supporters, according to affidavits filed with Congress, expended nearly a half-million dollars—$439,642—from January to June but wound up for that period $66,507 in the red.

THE DEFICIT was underwritten by the National Henry Wallace for President Committee which absorbed a loss of $49,460.

weathered more difficult moments in its brief span of life thus far.

Earlier, the government of Israel had ordered its forces to fight back in "self defense" against alleged Arab attacks in Northern Palestine. Arab leaders delivered an ultimatum to Bernadotte, warning of a "general offensive" unless alleged Jewish violations ceased.

Bernadotte had arrived in Tel Aviv to receive a warning from Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Shertok that Jews would resume fighting unless Syrian troops ceased their attacks in Galilee. Before he left for Rhodes, Bernadotte was informed that fighting there had stopped.

Bernadotte ordered Swedish Observer Colonel De Laval to proceed to the trouble spot at once and investigate the alleged violations.

He also told Israeli officials that effective control has been secured over British stocks of arms in the Middle East to make certain that none is turned over to the Arabs.

Israeli sources said that the UN mediator planned to spend the day at Rhodes organizing his truce compliance staff. His efforts to find a permanent solution to the Palestine problem will begin in earnest tomorrow when he flies to Cairo.

Bernadotte will spend two days conferring with Arab leaders in the Egyptian capital, and will then fly to Tel Aviv Thursday for two days of conferences with Israeli officials. He plans to return to Rhodes Saturday.

MEANWHILE, in Lake Success, all possible support to promote a permanent peace in the Holy Land has been extended to Bernadotte by the United Nations.

The UN's decision to extend this cooperation to the mediator came today as Bernadotte prepared for initial negotiations.

The mediator is understood to have been empowered by the Security Council and most of the major powers to demand that the Jews and Arabs take a realistic attitude during the peace talks and drop all unreasonable claims.

On that basis, Bernadotte, it was believed, will open the conference with a call to the Arabs to cease their demand for the extinction of the state of Israel.

Another suggestion from Bernadotte which may crop up early in the talks is that Jerusalem be neutralized.

gress who have had words to say about the President since he began "needling" Congress while journeying westward last week.

Mr. Truman has scheduled his return trip by train to Washington to permit him to reach there next Friday, a day before Congress is scheduled to adjourn.

President Truman is scheduled to arrive in Columbus at 5 p. m. (EST) Thursday where he will deliver an off-the-cuff speech from the rear platform of his special train.

mentary procedure—then is seated. He has been selected in advance, and usually is a member of Congress.

The platform committee then brings forth the "planks"—the principles and purposes around which the party's election campaign will be waged.

Finally the balloting begins—first for the party's presidential candidate, then for the vice-presidential candidate. A majority of the delegates is required for election in both conventions.

It is during the balloting, naturally, that the conventions reach a fever-pitch. As each contestant is nominated, large, frequently lengthy demonstrations are touched off.

A first ballot is taken, and so on. If, after three or four such ballots, no nominee has been accorded a majority, the contestants will begin to coalesce their votes.

Frequently, a "dark horse"—a man who previously had been given only the barest chance—is fixed upon by the party leaders as acceptable to all groups. Occasionally, as with Willie in 1940, the floor will be stamped into accepting an "outsider."

This year's Republican convention is confronted, certainly, with a situation which may produce a deadlock during the balloting, from which there would be no escape except through the selection of a "dark horse."

The delegation from Alabama, however, is determined to submit in nomination the name of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

DEATHS and Funerals

FRANK HAMMOND

Frank Hammond, 97, resident of Circleville until he moved to Columbus 25 years ago, died at 10:45 a. m. Sunday in St. Anthony hospital, Columbus.

Surviving are two nephews, Harvey S. Crane, with whom he lived and Joseph Howard, also of Columbus.

Friends may call in the Carroll Weir funeral home, Columbus, where services will be held at 10:30 a. m. Wednesday.

Burial will be made in Forest cemetery here.

CHARLES E. JUSTUS

Two brothers, George and Willard of Circleville, and a sister Mrs. Cora Wintough of Five Points, are among the survivors of Charles E. Justus, 78, of Columbus.

Last rites for Mr. Justus will be held at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday in the Leach and Son funeral home with burial in Green Lawn cemetery.

Also surviving are another brother, Levi; the widow, Mrs. Mary E. Justus, and a son, Harry G. Justus, all of Columbus.

Divorces Asked By 2 Persons In Court Here

A three-year-old marriage is headed for the rocks in Pickaway County common pleas court where William H. Miller has filed a petition for divorce from his wife on grounds of gross neglect of duty.

In the petition Miller stated he married Margaret E. Miller on Jan. 26, 1945, in Ashville and that they have no children.

The second divorce action was filed by Mary M. Stonerock who is seeking to end her nine-month-old marriage to Clyde R. Stonerock.

Her petition, which accuses him of gross neglect of duty, claims they were married Sept. 9, 1947, in Greenup, Ky., and that they have no children.

She is asking the court to restore her to her former name of Mary M. Brigner.

Truman Vetoes Bill To Freeze Social Security

He said that Congress "should not be satisfied at this session merely to improve public assistance benefits—urgent as that is."

Mr. Truman declared that he "would be inclined to approve the resolution in spite of my serious objections" except that Congress "still has ample opportunity" to pass a broader Social Security program before adjournment.

More Showers Due In Ohio

More rain to make the farmers happy was forecast for Ohio by the weather bureau Monday.

Forecasters said that showers are expected late Monday and that the intermittent rain will continue into Wednesday. Lower temperatures also were in prospect during the period.

Meanwhile, the state was enjoying another sunny Monday, with temperatures heading between 80 and 90 degrees in the afternoon. Ohio had a perfect Sunday with temperatures ranging between 72 at Perry and 80 at Chesapeake. Circleville's high was 77.

Woman Routs Burglar With Revolver Shots

Elizabeth Mayberry, who lives in the two-story shingled house in the second alley east from Court street connecting Main and Franklin streets, found early Sunday morning that the best defense is often a good offense.

It seems that about 3 a. m. Sunday she was disturbed by repeated attempts of a man to break into her house. She told police that the man tried to enter several times before she took action.

However, when she did go into action, she went all the way discharging several shots from a revolver at or near the would-be housebreaker. None of the shots were reported to have hit the man.

When police arrived, a thorough search of the neighborhood was made, but policemen were unable to find a trace of the culprit.

which gives the tariff commission new powers.

Across Capitol Hill, the House plans to act today on a Social Security benefits bill, take up its 19-through-25 draft bill tomorrow and send its last appropriation bill to the senate by mid-week.

The House, more anxious than the Senate to wind up legislative affairs by Saturday night, is reliably reported as ready to accept the Senate's restoration of most of the foreign aid funds slashed by the lower chamber.

The outlook for adjournment by June 19 improved over the weekend following:

House passage of a "stop-gap" farm program bill and Senate agreement to act on its own long-range farm measure before leaving for the convention.

Rapid-fire Senate committee approval of appropriation bills covering the foreign aid program, the Interior department and its controversial reclamation projects, and government corporations.

THE WORD quietly went out that, somehow, Congress will end its session sometime Saturday. The GOP convention, at which Speaker Joe Martin, (R) Mass., will preside as permanent chairman, opens Monday.

The fate of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill, now awaiting clearance by the House rules committee, is one of the uncertainties in the situation. The big question among Republicans is whether the House would knock out its public housing feature—most controversial item in the bill which presidential candidate Taft wants to see enacted. The bill has passed the Senate.

Columbus Pair Pays Fines Here

Two Columbus men were found guilty of traffic violations over the weekend by Circleville Mayor Thurman I. Miller, and together paid fines of $115 and costs.

Heaviest penalty was paid by Burley Fout, who gave the court $100 and costs for being in actual physical control of his auto while drunk Sunday.

The other $15 and costs was given the court by Francis Gordon, who was found guilty of speeding 70 miles per hour Sunday.

Both Columbus men were arrested on U. S. Route 23 north of Circleville by State Highway Patrolman C. E. Wells.

German Parley Delayed Again

FRANKFURT, June 14 — A three-power conference to plan Western German self-government was delayed indefinitely today at the request of France.

General Lucius D. Clay, United States military governor, said that the French had asked for the postponement until their national assembly decides on whether to accept the agreements reached by the London six-power conference.

That conference provided that a constitution for Western Germany be drawn up by the Germans themselves, and that the French zone would join Anglo-American Bizonia.

Major drives for funds are expected to be launched after the Republican convention beginning June 21, the Democratic party, July 12, and the Wallace party, July 23.

Indications are that this year's campaign expenditures will surpass the record set in the 1944 presidential election when backers of the late President Roosevelt and GOP Candidate Thomas E. Dewey kicked in with approximately $10 million.

The million already spent for electing the next President does not include funds spent by state and local groups.

Commie Grip On Czechs Now Is Ironclad

PRAGUE, June 14—Communism's grip on Czechoslovakia became ironclad today when Klement Gottwald, Red party chief, was installed as president of this one-time republic.

Gottwald was elected unanimously to succeed the resigned Eduard Benes by the mere formality of a show of hands in the national assembly.

The 300-man parliament, elected recently on a single, slate, gave no opposition whatever.

Its elective action formalized the Communist seizure of power that got under way in February when Gottwald, as premier, carried out a government reshuffle that eliminated all anti-Communist elements.

Election of Gottwald was a natural follow-through to the resignation of Benes, who stepped down ostensibly because of ill health after declining to sign Czechoslovakia's new constitution.

Despite his avowed atheism, Gottwald followed the formal procedure of presidential installations, attending a te deum mass at Prague's ancient St. Vitus cathedral.

Tense Peace Reigns; UN Talks Open

weathered more difficult moments in its brief span of life thus far.

Earlier, the government of Israel had ordered its forces to fight back in "self defense" against alleged Arab attacks in Northern Palestine. Arab leaders delivered an ultimatum to Bernadotte, warning of a "general offensive" unless alleged Jewish violations ceased.

Bernadotte had arrived in Tel Aviv to receive a warning from Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Shertok that Jews would resume fighting unless Syrian troops ceased their attacks in Galilee. Before he left for Rhodes, Bernadotte was informed that fighting there had stopped.

Bernadotte ordered Swedish Observer Colonel De Laval to proceed to the trouble spot at once and investigate the alleged violations.

He also told Israeli officials that effective control has been secured over British stocks of arms in the Middle East to make certain that none is turned over to the Arabs.

Israeli sources said that the UN mediator planned to spend the day at Rhodes organizing his truce compliance staff. His efforts to find a permanent solution to the Palestine problem will begin in earnest tomorrow when he flies to Cairo.

Bernadotte will spend two days conferring with Arab leaders in the Egyptian capital, and will then fly to Tel Aviv Thursday for two days of conferences with Israeli officials. He plans to return to Rhodes Saturday.

MEANWHILE, in Lake Success, all possible support to promote a permanent peace in the Holy Land has been extended to Bernadotte by the United Nations.

The UN's decision to extend this cooperation to the mediator came today as Bernadotte prepared for initial negotiations.

The mediator is understood to have been empowered by the Security Council and most of the major powers to demand that the Jews and Arabs take a realistic attitude during the peace talks and drop all unreasonable claims.

On that basis, Bernadotte, it was believed, will open the conference with a call to the Arabs to cease their demand for the extinction of the state of Israel.

Another suggestion from Bernadotte which may crop up early in the talks is that Jerusalem be neutralized.

House Expected To Pass Draft Bill Tomorrow

legislation differs on the time for launching induction.

Purpose of the draft is to bring the Army, Navy and Air Force up to new authorized strength which would provide a United States military establishment of one million, 956 thousand men by July 1, 1949, an increase of approximately 500,000 officers and enlisted personnel.

Most of the drafted men will go into the Army, which plans to induce 225,000 the first year.

Doctors and dentists up to 44 years would be required to register also and be subject to special calls as needed.

The House bill exempts from service aliens who have not declared their intention of becoming citizens; veterans with more than 90 days but less than 12 months service, provided they join a reserve unit; National Guardsmen; students receiving military training; conscientious objectors; scientists and clergymen. The President is authorized to defer married men.

The Senate bill exempts veterans who served 90 days between Pearl Harbor and V-J day and other veterans who served 18 months.

Canucks Battle Hopper Horde

EDMONTON, Alta., June 14—Canadian department of agriculture workers battled today with poison spray and army flame throwers to stem a wave of ravenous grasshoppers, sweeping over Central Canadian prairies.

Vast herds of the destructive insects are destroying the tender green grain in the heart of Canada's bread basket.

Infested areas already extend widely over Central and Southern Saskatchewan and agriculture department officials fear that damage already has exceeded the estimated $14 million worth done by the insects in 1940.

He arrived in Los Angeles this morning, driving directly to the Ambassador hotel.

To 40,000 San Franciscans gathered at the park's band course, President Truman declared yesterday that the U. S. Flag "has a significance that no other flag in the world ever had." He added:

"IT STANDS for everything the world should strive for as a whole."

He characterized the United Nations charter as the "constitution of the world" and said it must be made to work as the U. S. Constitution was made to work. Then he said:

"I am an optimist. It may take a generation or two to make the constitution of the United Nations work completely and fairly—but I am convinced that it will become effective. . . and there will be peace in the world."

Reds Tighten Traffic Rules In Germany

BERLIN, June 14 — Soviet authorities tightened their restrictions on rail and road traffic between Berlin and the western occupation zones today.

The Russian command cancelled all train stops in the British sector of the former German capital.

The British-controlled German news agency reported that only a ferry will be used to replace the Berlin-Frankfurt highway bridge across the Elbe river when Soviet authorities close the span Wednesday "for repairs."

Earlier, it had been hoped Russian authorities would permit a road detour during the "indefinite" period Soviet officials say the bridge will be closed.

Necessity of using a ferry will seriously hamper motor traffic between Berlin and Frankfurt, in the American occupation zone.

Cancellation of British sector Berlin train stops is believed intended to give the Russians strict control of all German rail passengers entering and leaving Berlin.

Woman Routs Burglar With Revolver Shots

Elizabeth Mayberry, who lives in the two-story shingled house in the second alley east from Court street connecting Main and Franklin streets, found early Sunday morning that the best defense is often a good offense.

It seems that about 3 a. m. Sunday she was disturbed by repeated attempts of a man to break into her house. She told police that the man tried to enter several times before she took action.

However, when she did go into action, she went all the way discharging several shots from a revolver at or near the would-be housebreaker. None of the shots were reported to have hit the man.

When police arrived, a thorough search of the neighborhood was made, but policemen were unable to find a trace of the culprit.

which gives the tariff commission new powers.

Across Capitol Hill, the House plans to act today on a Social Security benefits bill, take up its 19-through-25 draft bill tomorrow and send its last appropriation bill to the senate by mid-week.

The House, more anxious than the Senate to wind up legislative affairs by Saturday night, is reliably reported as ready to accept the Senate's restoration of most of the foreign aid funds slashed by the lower chamber.

The outlook for adjournment by June 19 improved over the weekend following:

House passage of a "stop-gap" farm program bill and Senate agreement to act on its own long-range farm measure before leaving for the convention.

Rapid-fire Senate committee approval of appropriation bills covering the foreign aid program, the interior department and its controversial reclamation projects, and government corporations.

THE WORD quietly went out that, somehow, Congress will end its session sometime Saturday. The GOP convention, at which Speaker Joe Martin, (R) Mass., will preside as permanent chairman, opens Monday.

The fate of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill, now awaiting clearance by the House rules committee, is one of the uncertainties in the situation. The big question among Republicans is whether the House would knock out its public housing feature—most controversial item in the bill which presidential candidate Taft wants to see enacted. The bill has passed the Senate.

Columbus Pair Pays Fines Here

Two Columbus men were found guilty of traffic violations over the weekend by Circleville Mayor Thurman I. Miller, and together paid fines of $115 and costs.

Heaviest penalty was paid by Burley Fout, who gave the court $100 and costs for being in actual physical control of his auto while drunk Sunday.

The other $15 and costs was given the court by Francis Gordon, who was found guilty of speeding 70 miles per hour Sunday.

Both Columbus men were arrested on U. S. Route 23 north of Circleville by State Highway Patrolman C. E. Wells.

German Parley Delayed Again

FRANKFURT, June 14 — A three-power conference to plan Western German self-government was delayed indefinitely today at the request of France.

General Lucius D. Clay, United States military governor, said that the French had asked for the postponement until their national assembly decides on whether to accept the agreements reached by the London six-power conference.

That conference provided that a constitution for Western Germany be drawn up by the Germans themselves and that the French zone would join Anglo-American Bizonia.

tween January and June but still had $135,690 on hand.

Major drives for funds are expected to be launched after the Republican convention beginning June 21, the Democratic, July 12, and the Wallace party, July 23.

Indications are that this year's campaign expenditures will surpass the record set in the 1944 presidential election when backers of the late President Roosevelt and GOP Candidate Thomas E. Dewey kicked in with approximately $10 million.

The million already spent for electing the next President does not include funds spent by state and local groups.

THE DEMOCRATIC national committee has raised $198,285 by Jefferson-Jackson Day dinners this year.

Wallace was listed as having contributed $1,000 for his own campaign. Other supporters are Lillian Hellman, author, $500; Corliss Lamont and Margaret Lamont, $3,200; Lewis Untermyer, poet, $100; Ira Hirschmann, N. Y., $100 and Louis Adamic, author, $100.

Supervised Playground Program Set To Get Underway At Park Tuesday

Circleville Kiwanis Club, Ted Lewis Park board and the city board of education have joined forces to conduct a supervised playground program for Circleville kiddies starting Tuesday. The program will be conducted five days a week until Aug. 15.

James Kirkpatrick, who last year handled 232 Circleville youngsters in the first of a planned series of the programs has been hired again to conduct the activities.

Kirkpatrick was the former athletic coach of Jackson Township high school, and is currently employed as coach of Hamilton Township school in Franklin County.

Kirkpatrick's salary for the two-month period is paid by the Circleville board of education although Kiwanians were responsible for securing the supervisor. The club also pays the bill for any equipment needed.

All Circleville boys and girls of school age, including those who expect to start in school next fall, may register for the Summer at any time. Kirkpatrick hopes that the majority of registration will be completed in the first week.

THE DAILY activities Monday through Friday will begin at 9 a. m., stop for noon lunch, and resumes at 1 p. m. to continue until 5 p. m.

The daily program set up at the park will depend mostly on the children, and what they wish to play or do. However, a wide variety of amusements, including competitive leagues in softball, football, soccer, tennis and boxing.

Other activities such as ping pong, hiking, deck tennis, story telling, handicraft classes, track events, checkers and a host of other games suitable to the age groups will be featured.

In last year's program many diversions such as swimming parties, picnics and hikes were sponsored by the Kiwanis Club. It is probable that similar activities will be sponsored again this year.

All Ted Lewis Park equipment is to be at disposal of the youngsters, and some new articles are to be added during the Summer.

While the girls' supervisor has not been employed yet, plans are being made for special girls' interests.

The Summer project will be filled with special prizes and awards to the children, and a grand prize is to be awarded by Kiwanis club at the termination of the activities.

WHILE RULES governing the picking of the winner of the grand award have not been formulated, the prize has already been set. It is strictly a boy's prize, and consists of a three-week vacation trip to Kiwanis Boy's Camp with all expenses paid.

No charge will be asked for registration in the Summer activities, all expenses to be paid by Kiwanians, under the Boys and Girls committee of that organization.

At registration, the applicant will be asked his name, age, parents' names, school attended, telephone number, special athletic preferences and for any special abilities he may have.

Mother Accused Of Poisoning Daughter, 11

CINCINNATI, June 14—Mrs. Mary Clay Watts, 43, was accused today of poisoning her daughter, Barbara Ann, 11, to death and Hamilton County Coroner Herbert Lyle ruled the supposedly natural death of her husband in 1944 was caused by arsenic poisoning.

The slender matron, in a Cincinnati jail cell, calmly denied the first degree murder charge filed by Norwood Police Chief Charles W. Fritz, but referred all questions to her attorney. She said:

"I am innocent. I didn't kill Barbara Ann."

Investigation of the girl's long illness began when two physicians refused to sign her death warrant May 15.

The body of Mrs. Watts' husband, Willis, was exhumed from its Winchester, Ky., grave a week ago. He had been an invalid for 27 months before his death, following an automobile accident in which he suffered a fractured spine, ribs and pelvic bone.

Dr. Frank Dutro, Cincinnati police pathologist said an autopsy performed on the daughter's body showed death was caused by administration of mercury and barbituates, both poisons, over a long period of time.

Sharp Increase In School Rolls Seen By OEA

COLUMBUS, June 14—The Ohio Education Association today forecast an increase in school enrollment of more than 300,000 within the next five years, and predicted a minimum need for 3,000 new teachers annually by 1953-54.

OEA Research Director T. G. O'Keefe said that the addition of kindergarten and special students would push the total over 1,400,000 as compared with 1,100,000 pupils for the past school year.

Cause for the increase was attributed to Ohio's extraordinary birth total for 1947, which more than doubled the 1933 total and was considerably higher than that for 1946.

"School enrollment in the elementary grades may be expected to increase with greater rapidity each year," O'Keefe said, "making the shortage of qualified teachers and buildings more critical."

Elementary enrollment alone is expected to pass the million mark by 1953, calling for more elementary teachers. Only 851 elementary teachers were trained in Ohio colleges this year.

The state of Utah was named after the Utes, an Indian tribe.

Parts Shortage Fools Car Plants

DETROIT, June 14—Several thousand automotive workers returned to their jobs today, but thousands more were idle as a result of parts shortages.

About 7,000 employees at two Budd Wheel Co. plants returned to work following a truce agreement in a three-day strike. Resumption of operations at the Budd factories paved the way for the return of 15,000 Chrysler workers, laid off Friday when supplies were cut off.

Some 200,000 General Motors employees, however, started a one-week layoff attributed to the steel shortage. Another 30,000 Ford workers, idled over a three-day weekend as parts shipments from branch plants lagged, returned to work today.

Murder Trial Opens In Capital

COLUMBUS, June 14—The first Franklin County first degree murder trial in three years starts here today when Henry Strain, 26, is to defend himself against charges of taking part in the sex murder of a 76-year-old woman in 1940.

Police said Strain admitted being in the home of Miss Alice Lauterbach when she was killed by three men, but he denies any part in the crime and says he doesn't remember the names of the two other men.

Steel Output May Set Record

CLEVELAND, June 14—Steel production this year should total 87 or 88 million tons, two or three million tons more than in 1947, provided no further production stoppages occur.

This prediction was made today by Magazine Steel, national metalworking trade publication. The magazine declared: "Allocation, European and defense requirements over the remainder of this year are expected to add no more than four million tons to the present demand burden."

The magazine reported that despite the April coal mine stoppage which cost 1,500,000 tons of steel, output of ingots in the first six months of this year is expected to come out around 43

SECURITY IN OLD AGE

COMPLETE congressional action is not probable for the proposal, before the House, to embrace 3,500,000 additional workers within the Social Security system, because of the shortness of time remaining in the present session. But it is helpful to bring the proposal to discussion.

The Social Security system still is relatively new, and in reality is still in an experimental stage. But it has operated sufficiently to convince most doubters that the basic idea is sound and good. Its practical value has been greatly reduced because of the decline in the purchasing value of the dollar since the payment rates were worked out in the low-price days of the thirties.

Congress has been loath to tamper with the pay schedule, since higher payment rates would lead inevitably to higher tax rates. This is a day in which considerable fortitude is required to raise a new tax. Broadening of the program, to cover additional workers, would not necessarily involve a tax rate increase, as new workers insured also would become new taxpayers for the system.

Every productive worker is entitled to the prospect of financial security when working days end. The ideal method might be to assure every productive worker of sufficient income to enable him to make his own preparation for old age. The Social Security system, while perhaps less ideal, seems more immediately practical.

TESTIMONY OF THE LOST

WHAT is known to few is that RAF planes are still searching Europe to find trace of the 9,000 RAF men still missing from the war. Altogether 11,000 air men, lost over European battlefields, have been traced, but as many more who disappeared over oceans never will be accounted for.

It is important that a world concentrating on peace problems be reminded now and then that for hundreds of thousands war dead cannot be found, will always be listed, "Missing." Likewise return of the bodies of dead service men for burial in this country is a steady, silent witness of the cost of war. It may give, to those always ready to fight, pause for thought.

Future generations may wonder and worry about how the word "erp", if it is a word, came into the language, if it is a language.

The next president will have plenty of grief, but that does not seem to deter anyone from seeking the job.

These Days

George E. Sokolsky's

Dean Gauss of Princeton university, a distinguished scholar, made this statement according to The Daily Worker:

"If you mean by Communism acceptance of the theories of Karl Marx and attempting to put them into practice, then we must defend their rights. I think Communism is a protest against economic conditions and everybody has the right in a democracy to protest against an economic system in which he does not believe."

Something seems very queer about this paragraph. Certainly, Dean Gauss knows what is meant by Communist. He also knows that Communism, as expressed in "the theories of Karl Marx," has ceased to be a matter of academic discussion and has become a world movement not only for the conversion of men to certain ideas but an active force, supported by the armed forces of a great power spreading imperialistically in Europe and Asia, maintaining in all countries a Fifth Column which, in critical and troubled times, seizes power by whatever means are available. In many countries, such a group has seized power. In the United States, such a group is now led by Henry Wallace.

Precisely, what is Dean Gauss defending? His criticism is of the Thomas committee of Congress which has asked certain persons to identify themselves under oath. The Thomas committee has not denied them the right to be Marxists or Communists or Socialists or Republicans or Democrats. It has, in effect, said to them that these are troubled times, that a large number of countries have been conquered by subversive but small groups of natives serving a foreign power and that the Congress of the United States would like to know how much of that is going on in the United States.

Cardinal Spellman proclaims himself a Roman Catholic, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise prides himself on his Judaism, Robert A. Taft shouts from the housetops that he is a Republican, Norman Thomas announces his continued leadership of the Socialists, Harry Truman is unmistakably a Democrat—why should any man who is a Communist decline to announce it? Why should he object to admit it?

The reason, of course, is that, by the rules of international Communism, each of its partisans is ipso facto an agent of a foreign power. To admit affiliation with this party is to admit serving a foreign master. The Communist is not free to labor for the improvement of the economic system in the United States; he is required to play that role, to serve that line which is designated by a foreign power seeking to establish a political and intellectual hegemony over mankind.

For instance, if I were asked to testify under oath that I am a Republican, I could so state with the limitations that I have not always voted the Republican ticket and do not intend to be bound to do so in the future. There are some Democrats I prefer to some Republicans. I would not regard it as a violation of my rights to be asked a question that would bring forth such a reply. Nor would I refuse to answer whether I am a Communist. All I would have to say is, No!

Why refuse to answer that, particularly in the troubled times through which we are passing? It would seem to me that Dean Gauss is the possessor of greater knowledge than wisdom.

LAFF-A-DAY

Symptoms That Need Attention

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

MANY more people have gallbladder trouble than ever suspect it. It is estimated that among those over 40, at least one person in ten has some type of gallbladder disease. The classic symptoms—pain in the right upper part of the abdomen, a feeling of fullness after eating, sickness at the stomach—are all experienced from time to time, but nothing is done about them because the discomfort is passing. The sufferer believes he has had only a "touch of indigestion."

It goes without saying that such symptoms as these, particularly if they are repeated, demand a thorough examination. This may include X-rays of the gallbladder area. Gallstones will not always show in an X-ray plate, but most of them do. In any case, with newer methods of X-ray examination, it is possible to determine if the gallbladder is functioning or working as it should. After such careful study, it is possible for the physician to determine just what type of treatment will be most effective.

Careful Dieting

In some instances, even though stones are present, operation may not be necessary. In many cases, whether there are stones or only continued inflammation, known as chronic cholecystitis, treatment may include careful dieting, reduction of weight, and exercising. With mild symptoms attacks may be completely prevented by following the proper diet and eliminating certain food.

I have outlined some diets for gallbladder disease to aid you in following your physician's instructions. I shall be glad to send them to you if you will write, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Depends on Symptoms

The exact type of diet to be used depends to a great extent on the symptoms present. In some cases it may be wise to cut down on the fats in the diet since these stimulate contractions of the gallbladder. On the other hand, such contractions may be desirable in order to speed up the flow of the bile and, in these instances, the inclusion of fats in the diet may be helpful.

Above all, do not neglect what you believe may be a gallbladder disturbance. Consult your physician so that he may be able to determine just what disorder is present, and follow the advice which he gives you so that your difficulty may be eliminated.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

H. C. B.: I have a dull, aching pain in my ankle. Pain runs down my leg to my ankle. It is worse in the morning. What is the cause?

Answer: The cause of this condition can only be determined by means of a careful examination. It may be due to arthritis or inflammation of the ankle joints, or to some disturbance of the circulation or nervous system.

When the cause is found, proper treatment can be advised.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

MRS. POTTS said, with an air of scarcely concealed curiosity, "What do you think of that Eph Merwell, Mr. Paulson? I've seen you talking to him a couple of times."

"I get my gas there," Andrew informed her. "I like him. He has a real sense of humor. And so has his cat."

Mrs. Potts was distinctly startled. "I never heard of such a thing—a cat with a sense of humor! And as for that Eph—he's nothing but a show-off. Always twisting the things he says so's he can catch people off-guard and surprise 'em. He's lazy, too."

Andrew raised his brows. "Lazy? He doesn't strike me that way."

"Well, he is. He could be doing a man's work instead of setting around most of the day in that shack of his. How he makes out, I don't know—there's not enough money in it to keep him going, really—but he always seems to have plenty. Still keeps on that big house of his in town, and gives his good-for-nothin' brother and family free rent and board, far as I can see. 'Course he's a perfect sink-hole of gossip—between what he picks up at the filling station, and what his sister-in-law passes on to him, he knows just about everything that's happening around here, and he's managed to make a few deals that way—like this Wheeler place you're interested in. If you buy it, he'll have his cut from Lije Stevens, see if he doesn't!"

"He's not married?" Andrew asked, keeping a straight face with an effort.

"Married! That critter! No woman would have him, I guess. I guess he's tried, often enough, though."

"Why, Ma," Gloria protested, resting her elbows on the book she was supposed to be studying, "you know you said yourself he was considered quite a catch, and if you hadn't married Pa—"

Her mother turned on her fiercely. "You get back to your lessons, young lady. I don't want to hear another word out of you."

Andrew suddenly remembered Gloria had told him, that first day when he had applied for a room, that Eph was "sweet on her mother." He wondered what Mrs. Potts really had against Merwell. But before he could explore this train of thought, his landlady said, "Come to think of it, Gloria, I left my old felt hat in the barn this afternoon when I was tying up in there. You go get it."

"Oh, Ma," Gloria wailed, "what on earth do you want that old hat now for? I can get it tomorrow."

"Yes, and I can catch a cold in my head, putting on a hat that's been hanging in a cold barn all night. Now, hurry up!"

"But—but it's dark out there. I'll get it," Andrew offered, rising to his feet.

"You stay set, Mr. Paulson," Mrs. Potts said in an authoritative voice. "I asked Gloria to get it. Time she got over these fool childish notions about the dark, anyway."

Gloria shrugged into her wind-

breaker most unwillingly, and finally left the warm, lighted kitchen. At once her mother turned to Andrew. "Mr. Paulson," she said, an unusual sense of urgency in her voice, "I did that just to get her out of the room. I wanted to ask you—would you consider boarding here? You see, she continued, before he could speak, "if you should buy that Wheeler farm, you'd be leaving in a couple months or so, and I wouldn't mind the extra work if it was only that long. It would save you money, too," she added, as if he needed an inducement.

Andrew opened his mouth to accept heartily, and remembered, just in time, the tradition of bargaining which Mrs. Potts held so dear. "How much would it come to?" he asked instead.

"Well, you're getting your breakfasts now, and I would be dinner and supper. I figure I could find you right well for say—seven dollars extra a week."

"That would make it sixteen dollars," Andrew said in a doubtful voice, although he was more than anxious to jump at the offer.

Mrs. Potts bit her lip, while her pale eyes swiveled rapidly from him to the door. Gloria might be back at any moment. "Make it fifteen," she said, breathlessly.

"That suits me fine," Andrew said, and she sat back with a sigh of relief.

"I might as well tell you," she said in a lower tone, and speaking rapidly, "that I'm doing this because of Gloria. Her manners could stand a little prettifying up, and it's been my observation," she added drily, "that girls will mind their manners better with a man around."

Gloria came back into the kitchen, carrying the battered grey felt hat which her mother wore for chores about the place, as if it were some species of particularly repulsive worm. "It was on the floor," she said in a quavering voice, "and something ran out of one of the stalls and I nearly stepped on it!"

"Never mind that now," her mother said briskly. "Hang it up on the hook, and come and finish your lessons. And then you can set the table—properly, young lady—because Mr. Paulson is going to be eating here from now on."

"Eating here!" Gloria echoed, her eyes enormous with happy emotion. "You mean dinner and supper?"

"What else is there?" her mother inquired acidly. "He already takes breakfast here."

"Oh, Mr. Paulson, Gloria breathed, "how perfectly swell!" She gulped slightly. "I mean—I mean—how definitely swell!"

His landlady had frankly admitted that he was to become a boarder simply because of his influence on Gloria, but there was no doubt in Andrew's mind that her daughter was truly happy to have him. It gave him an extraordinarily warm feeling.

Joan was sitting in a narrow beam of sunlight which came in through the east window of Alec Priest's office. Her head was bent over a ledger, and her mouth pouted slightly with concentration.

Andrew stood still in the doorway, and wondered a little at the queer churning sensation within him. Her hair had fallen forward a little, and the white Peter Pan collar of her blouse, lying smooth and pristine against her blue sweaters, gave her a little-girl look.

Aware suddenly that someone was watching her, she looked up, and he saw the soft rose-color flood her face as she recognized him. Her mouth had two little dimples at the corner when she smiled, and her eyes crinkled with friendliness. "Come in," she said. "Here on business?"

"Yes, I'm on a still hunt for some lumber," he admitted. "Lumber?" She wrinkled her forehead in pretended ignorance. "What is that?"

"Don't tell me everybody is right, and you haven't any," he said in mock despair. But there was enough real feeling in his voice to make her give him a second glance.

"Do you really need it badly?" she asked.

He nodded. "I've found the place I want to buy, I think. But it needs some remodeling."

"Couldn't it wait?"

"I'm afraid not. Of course, everything's tentative so far. I haven't even had time to get the soil report from the University yet."

"Didn't you take it to the County Agent?" she inquired.

"What's the County Agent?"

She shook her head at him. "The County Agricultural Agent, to give him his full title, is the man who is the expert on soils and crops, farm management, forestry, dairying, orcharding—and heaven knows what else. He's stationed at Woodsville with his staff, and he's the man to see if you're thinking of buying a farm."

Andrew was surprised. "Thanks for the tip. I didn't know anything about him. I'll look him up today, that is, if I make any headway on the lumber problem."

"Did you say 'lumber'?" Alec Priest demanded, standing in the doorway of his office.

Andrew wheeled around with a grin. "Now, don't you start it, too," he said.

"Start what? I'd give a good deal to start this mill running. Right now we haven't enough in the place to make a cigar box."

Andrew sighed. "Mrs. Potts said a dog-house. I see the situation is getting worse."

"What did you want for, and how much?" Alec said, adding at once, "I'm just asking out of curiosity, that's all. Not that I can do anything about it, but everybody else in this town has told me his troubles, so you might as well get in with the crowd."

Andrew said seriously, "I'm thinking of buying a farm, but the house needs some fixing up."

"What farm?" Alec asked. "The Wheeler place—out East Branchway?"

He saw Joan's startled look, saw her start to open her mouth, then shut it again with decision.

JOBS UPON A TIME

The 1948 Pulitzer best play of the year award winner, Tennessee Williams, author of A Streetcar Named Desire, really scratched for a living before success came. He was once a waiter, then a feather picker on a California squab ranch. Winning a $1,000 award for a play, Battle of Angels, Tennessee went to New York. His play, however, was a failure. Williams wrote his first successful play, The Glass Menagerie, in Hollywood, Tennessee, whose real name is Thomas Lanier Williams, wrote Streetcar in Mexico. He took the Tennessee name because his ancestors fought the Indians in Tennessee. He attended the Universities of Missouri and Iowa.

If one member of a non-bidding pair leads a high honor to the first trick, what does that tell the declarer about his partner's hand?

By MEL HEIMER

NEW YORK—This column seems to deal more frequently than perhaps it should with artists, and my only excuse is that I meet a lot of artists. I meet a lot of bartenders, too, but regardless of the quaint fixations of many of my literary colleagues, who persist in endowing bar-keepers with magical and mystical qualities, when you've met one you've met them all.

Artists, now, are something else again. Today, for example, I came across a 29-year-old one named Dimitri Petrov, who is so far advanced in modern art that he benevolently labels Salvatore Dali the "Edgar A. Guest of surrealists," but Dimitri's life and times are notable not so much for his weird paintings as for the fact that he lost his right hand 10 years ago in a hamburger-grinding machine and learned to paint with his left.

The movies would have us believe that when a stark tragedy like that occurs to an artist or musician, he promptly goes out and jumps off a bridge. Interviewed today in the rather eerie quarters of the Hugo Gallery in 55th street (which evidently is the haunt of all the avant-garde painters and proudly exhibits their tomatoes growing out of a blowtorch, etc.), Dimitri confessed that his first reaction was nowhere near so gloomy.

"I was working on the night shift in a hamburger joint in Philadelphia, in 1938," he said, "and I slipped on a spot of blood on the floor near the grinder, and there I was without a hand."

"When something like that happens, you don't meditate on your career. I didn't, anyway. I just thought swiftly, 'Thank God I'm alive.'"

THEY PACKED PETROV OFF TO A HOSPITAL, but after a few weeks he was out again, and he then had his only dark period.

"I wasn't sad, mind you," he said, "but I was as sore as a boil. So I set out to kill myself—only the easy way. I started to drink myself to death."

At the age of 19, this is a Herculean task, so presently Dimitri gave up in disgust and began to paint with his left hand. Just like that.

I am personally so violently right-handed that I just cannot imagine ever being able to do anything with my left hand, but to Dimitri the transition was child's play.

"It was awkward for maybe a couple of weeks," he said, "and then it was the same as if I always had used it. After all—to a painter the hand is only a mechanism. It's what is in the mind and heart that is the painting. You can train an idiot to paint. Come to think of it, maybe that's why so many of them do."

The only lingering reaction to the loss of his hand was one of embarrassment in the presence of girls. Dimitri is a genial, dark, self-possessed young man, but the emotional shock of his accident was so great that even he suffered for a while from an inferiority complex.

It wore off gradually, however. Now, he declared, he never even thinks of the fact that he's one-handed. He married a fellow painter, a girl who studied at the terrible-tempered Mr. Barnes' foundation in Philadelphia, and although she does canvasses that are recognizable, as contrasted to some of the more obtuse modern work, he thinks she is a wonderful artist.

THE PETROVS HAVE TWO CHILDREN. The eldest, 7-year-old Nura (that's a girl, son), already has had several exhibitions of her own paintings, and last year at one held in Philadelphia's Print club, every blessed canvas was sold.

SECURITY IN OLD AGE

COMPLETE congressional action is not probable for the proposal, before the House, to embrace 3,500,000 additional workers within the Social Security system, because of the shortness of time remaining in the present session. But it is helpful to bring the proposal to discussion.

The Social Security system still is relatively new, and in reality is still in an experimental stage. But it has operated sufficiently to convince most doubters that the basic idea is sound and good. Its practical value has been greatly reduced because of the decline in the purchasing value of the dollar since the payment rates were worked out in the low-price days of the thirties.

Congress has been loath to tamper with the pay schedule, since higher payment rates would lead inevitably to higher tax rates. This is a day in which considerable fortitude is required to raise any tax. Broadening of the program, to cover additional workers, would not necessarily involve a tax rate increase, as new workers insured also would become new taxpayers for the system.

Every productive worker is entitled to the prospect of financial security when working days end. The ideal method might be to assure every productive worker of sufficient income to enable him to make his own preparation for old age. The Social Security system, while perhaps less ideal, seems more immediately practical.

TESTIMONY OF THE LOST

WHAT is known to few is that RAF planes are still searching Europe to find trace of the 9,000 RAF men still missing from the war. Altogether 11,000 air men, lost over European battlefields, have been traced, but as many more who disappeared over oceans never will be accounted for.

It is important that a world concentrating on peace problems be reminded now and then that for hundreds of thousands the war will never end, that for tens of thousands war dead cannot be found, will always be listed, "Missing." Likewise return of the bodies of dead service men for burial in this country is a steady, silent witness of the cost of war. It may give, to those always ready to fight, pause for thought.

Future generations may wonder and worry about how the word "erp", if it is a word, came into the language, if it is a language.

The next president will have plenty of grief, but that does not seem to deter anyone from seeking the job.

These Days

George E. Sokolsky's

Dean Gauss of Princeton university, a distinguished scholar, made this statement according to The Daily Worker:

"If you mean by Communism acceptance of the theories of Karl Marx and attempting to put them into practice, then we must defend their rights. I think Communism is a protest against economic conditions and everybody has the right in a democracy to protest against an economic system in which he does not believe."

Something seems very queer about this paragraph. Certainly, Dean Gauss knows what is meant by Communist. He also knows that Communism, as expressed in "the theories of Karl Marx," has ceased to be a matter of academic discussion and has become a world movement not only for the conversion of men to certain ideas but an active force, supported by the armed forces of a great power spreading imperially in Europe and Asia, maintaining in all countries a Fifth Column which, in critical and troubled times, seizes power by whatever means are available. In many countries, such a group has seized power. In the United States, such a group is now led by Henry Wallace.

Precisely, what is Dean Gauss defining? His criticism is of the Thomas committee of Congress which has asked certain persons to identify themselves under oath. The Thomas committee has not denied them the right to be Marxists or Communists or Socialists or Republicans or Democrats. It has, in effect, said to them that these are troubled times, that a large number of countries have been conquered by subversive but small groups of natives serving a foreign power and that the Congress of the United States would like to know how much of that is going on in the United States.

Cardinal Spellman proclaims himself a Roman Catholic, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise prides himself on his Judaism, Robert A. Taft shouts from the house-tops that he is a Republican, Norman Thomas announces his continued leadership of the Socialists, Harry Truman is unmistakably a Democrat—why should any man who is a Communist decline to announce it? Why should he object to admit it?

The reason, of course, is that, by the rules of international Communism, each of its partisans is ipso facto an agent of a foreign power. To admit affiliation with this party is to admit serving a foreign master. The Communist is not free to labor for the improvement of the economic system in the United States; he is required to play that role, to serve that line which is designated by a foreign power seeking to establish a political and intellectual hegemony over mankind.

For instance, if I were asked to testify under oath that I am a Republican, I could so state with the limitations that I have not always voted the Republican ticket and do not intend to be bound to do so in the future. There are some Democrats I prefer to some Republicans. I would not regard it as a violation of my rights to be asked a question that would bring forth such a reply. Nor would I refuse to answer whether I am a Communist. All I would have to say is, No!

Why refuse to answer that, particularly in the troubled times through which we are passing? It would seem to me that Dean Gauss is the possessor of greater knowledge than wisdom.

"Yes, and I can catch a cold in my head, putting on a hat that's been hanging in a cold barn all night. Now, hurry up!"

"But—but it's dark out there," "I'll get it," Andrew offered, rising to his feet.

"You stay set, Mr. Paulson," Mrs. Potts said in an authoritative voice. "I asked Gloria to get it. Time she got over these fool childish notions about the dark, anyway."

Gloria shrugged into her wind-

breaker most unwillingly, and finally left the warm, lighted kitchen. At once her mother turned to Andrew. "Mr. Paulson," she said, an unusual sense of urgency in her voice, "I did that just to get her out of the room. I wanted to ask you—would you consider boarding here? You see, she's continued before he could speak, 'if you should buy that Wheeler farm, you'd be leaving in a couple months or so, and I wouldn't mind the extra work if it was only that long. It would save you money, too,' she added, as if he needed an inducement."

Andrew opened his mouth to accept heartily, and remembered, just in time, the tradition of bargaining which Mrs. Potts held so dear. "How much would it come to?" he asked instead.

"Well, you're getting your breakfasts now, and it would be dinners and suppers. I figure I could feed you right well for—say—seven dollars extra a week."

"That would make it sixteen dollars," Andrew said in a doubtful voice, although he was more than anxious to jump at the offer.

Mrs. Potts bit her lip, while her pale eyes swiveled rapidly from him to the door. Gloria might be back at any moment. "Make it fifteen," she said, breathlessly.

"That suits me fine," Andrew said, and she sat back with a sigh of relief.

"I might as well tell you," she said in a lower tone, and speaking rapidly, "that I'm doing this because of Gloria. Her manners could stand a little bettering up, and it's been my observation, she added drily, "that girls will mind their manners better with a man around."

Gloria came back into the kitchen, carrying the battered grey felt hat which her mother wore for chores about the place, as if it were some species of particularly repulsive worm. "It was on the floor," she said in a quavering voice, "and something ran out of one of the stalls and I nearly stepped on it!"

"Never mind that now," her mother said briskly. "Hang it up on the hook, and come and finish your lessons. And then you can set the table—properly, young lady—because Mr. Paulson is going to be eating here from now on."

"Eating here!" Gloria echoed, her eyes enormous with happy emotion. "You mean dinner and supper?"

"What else is there?" her mother inquired acidly. "He already takes breakfast here."

"Oh, Mr. Paulson, Gloria breathed, "how perfectly swell!" She gulped slightly. "I mean—I mean—how definitely swell!"

His landlady had frankly admitted that he was to become a boarder simply because of his influence on Gloria, but there was no doubt in Andrew's mind that her daughter was truly happy to have him. It gave him an extraordinarily warm feeling.

Joan was sitting in a narrow beam of sunlight which came in through the east window of Alec Priest's office. Her head was bent over a ledger, and her mouth pouted slightly with concentration. Andrew stood still in the doorway, and wondered a little at the queer churning sensation within him. Her hair had fallen forward a little, and the white Peter Pan collar of her blouse, lying smooth and pristine against her blue sweater, gave her a little-girl look. He was suddenly aware that someone was watching her, she looked up, and he saw the soft rose-color flood her face as she recognized him. Her mouth had two little dimples at the corner when she smiled, and her eyes crinkled with friendliness. "Come in," she said. "Here on business?"

"Yes, I'm on a still hunt for some lumber," he admitted. "Lumber?" She wrinkled her forehead in pretended ignorance. "What is that?"

"Don't tell me everybody is right, and you haven't any," he said in mock despair. But there was enough real feeling in his voice to make her give him a second glance.

"Do you really need it badly?" she asked.

He nodded. "I've found the place I want to buy, I think. But it needs some remodeling."

"Couldn't it wait?" "I'm afraid not. Of course, everything's tentative so far. I haven't even had time to get the soil report from the University yet."

"Didn't you take it to the County Agent?" she inquired.

"What's a County Agent?" She shook her head at him. "The County Agricultural Agent, to give him his full title, is the man who is the expert on soils and crops, farm management, forestry, dairying, orcharding—and heaven knows what else. He's stationed at Woodville with his staff, and he's the man to see if you're thinking of buying a farm."

Andrew was surprised. "Thanks for the tip. I didn't know anything about him. I'll look him up today, that is, if I make any headway on the lumber problem."

"Did you say 'lumber'?" Alec Priest demanded, standing in the doorway of his office.

Andrew wheeled around with a grin. "Now, don't you start it, too," he said.

"Start what? I'd give a good deal to start this mill running. Right now we haven't enough in the place to make a cigar box."

Andrew sighed. "Mrs. Potts said a dog-house. I see the situation is getting worse."

"What did you want it for, and how much?" Alec asked, adding at once, "I'm just asking out of curiosity, that's all. Not that I can do anything about it, but everybody else in this town has told me his troubles, so you might as well get in with the crowd."

Andrew said seriously, "I'm thinking of buying a farm, but the house needs some fixing up."

"What farm?" Alec asked. "The Wheeler place—out East Branchville way?"

He saw Joan's startled look, saw her start to open her mouth, then shut it again with decision.

JOBS UPON A TIME
The 1948 Pulitzer best play of the year award winner, Tennessee Williams, author of A Streetcar Named Desire, really scratched for a living before success came. He was once a waiter, then a feather picker on a California squab ranch. Winning a $1,000 award for a play, Battle of Angels, Tennessee went to New York. His play, however, was a failure. Williams wrote his first successful play, The Glass Menagerie, in Hollywood, Tennessee, whose real name is Thomas Lanier Williams, wrote Streetcar in Mexico. He took the Tennessee name because his ancestors fought the Indians in Tennessee. He attended the Universities of Missouri and Iowa.

was born three years after the Civil War ended. Though he did not have much formal schooling, he became a county judge and Texas representative for two years before he was elected to the United States House of Representatives in 1903. Garner was in Congress 30 years, with a term as speaker of the House, when he was chosen President Roosevelt's first running mate in 1932, and re-elected on the second-term ticket. After that Garner retired to his farm in Uvalde, Tex., where he says he is going to live until he's 93. Born in 1868, he has 13 years to go. He will be 80 in November.

If one member of a non-bidding pair leads a high honor to the first trick, what does that tell the declarer about his partner's hand?

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

Mel Heimer

NEW YORK—This column seems to deal more frequently than perhaps it should with artists, and my only excuse is that I meet a lot of artists. I meet a lot of bartenders, too, but regardless of the quaint fixations of many of my literary colleagues, who persist in endowing bar-keeps with magical and mystical qualities, when you've met one you've met them all.

Artists, now, are something else again. Today, for example, I came across a 29-year-old one named Dimitri Petrov, who is so far advanced in modern art that he benevolently labels Salvador Dali the "Edgar A. Guest of surrealists," but Dimitri's life and times are notable not so much for his weird paintings as for the fact that he lost his right hand 10 years ago in a hamburger-grinding machine and learned to paint with his left.

The movies would have us believe that a stark tragedy like that occurs to an artist or musician, he promptly goes out and jumps off a bridge. Interviewed today in the rather eerie quarters of the Hugo Gallery in 55th street (which evidently is the haunt of all the avant-garde painters and proudly exhibits their tomatoes growing out of a blowtorch, etc.), Dimitri confessed that his first reaction was nowhere near so gloomy.

"I was working on the night shift in a hamburger joint in Philadelphia, in 1938," he said, "and I slipped on a spot of blood on the floor near the grinder, and there I was without a hand."

"When something like that happens, you don't meditate on your career, I didn't, anyway. I just thought swiftly, 'Thank God I'm alive.'"

THEY PACKED PETROV OFF TO A HOSPITAL, but after a few weeks he was out again, and he then had his only dark period.

"I wasn't sad, mind you," he said, "but I was as sore as a boil. So I set out to kill myself—only the easy way. I started to drink myself to death."

At the age of 19, this is a Herculean task, so presently Dimitri gave up in disgust and began to paint with his left hand. Just like that.

I am personally so violently right-handed that I just cannot imagine ever being able to do anything with my left hand, but to Dimitri the transition was child's play.

"It was awkward for maybe a couple of weeks," he said, "and then it was the same as if I always had used it. After all—to a painter the hand is only a mechanism. It's what is in the mind and heart that is the painting. You can train an idiot to paint. Come to think of it, maybe that's why so many of them do."

The only lingering reaction to the loss of his hand was one of embarrassment in the presence of girls. Dimitri is a genial, dark, self-possessed young man, but the emotional shock of his accident was so great that even he suffered for a while from an inferiority complex.

It wore off gradually, however. Now, he declared, he never even thinks of the fact that he's one-handed. He married a fellow painter, a girl who studied at the terrible-tempered Mr. Barnes' foundation in Philadelphia, and although she does canvasses that are recognizable, as contrasted to some of the more obtuse modern work, he thinks she is a wonderful artist.

THE PETROVS HAVE TWO CHILDREN. The eldest, 7-year-old Nura (that's a girl, son), already has had several exhibitions of her own paintings, and last year at one held in Philadelphia's Print club, every blessed canvas was sold.

Discreetly, I asked Dimitri what a 7-year-old girl's paintings bring on the open market. "Oh, kid prices," he said, modestly. "Around $25 or so." Every now and then Mr. and Mrs. Petrov, who live in Philadelphia, hire a baby sitter for the night—and they promptly catch a train for New York.

Dimitri spends as much time here as he can, going home only to "sleep and see my family." He recently acquired a home in Oyster Bay, L. I., into which they will move next month. The Manhattan fever is in his bloodstream. "I like to walk up and down the streets," he said, which seems logical, "and even just get on and off New York buses," which is a little less logical.

When Dimitri first lived in New York, he was 17 and fresh from a year's work at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. He moved over a greasy spoon in Bethune street in Greenwich Village, and stayed here until he ran out of money.

Amelia Ruth Lemley Becomes Bride Of Walter J. Garner

Rev. C. L. Thomas Performs Rites

The Rev. C. L. Thomas, retired Methodist minister, officiated Saturday evening for the wedding of Miss Amelia Ruth Lemley and Walter J. Garner.

The double ring ceremony was performed in the minister's home in East Ringgold at 8 p. m. in the presence of the immediate families.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Riffin of South Washington street. Her husband is the son of Mrs. Mazie Garner of East Mill street, and the late Nelson F. Garner.

Accessories of gold were worn by the bride with her white dressmaker suit. At her lapel she pinned a corsage of yellow rose buds.

Bridesmaid was Miss Ruth McCoy of Columbus. She wore a pink suit, black accessories and a pink and white carnation corsage.

Martin Garner attended his brother as best man.

Both the new Mr. and Mrs. Garner were graduated by Circleville high school. The bride is employed by Circleville First National Bank. Garner is associated with Circleville Savings and Banking Co.

When the bride and bridegroom return from a trip through the East, they will make their home on South Washington street.

Dads Honored At Star Grange

The program of Star Grange was arranged in keeping with Father's Day at the meeting in Five Points.

Mrs. Herman Porter was in charge of the program which opened with "any old thing is good enough for Dad", and closed with a special treat and all the "trimmings" for the feted guests.

During the program selections were read from McGuffey's reader. Nancy Neff read "Dad". Suzanne Porter read "Dad's Ole Breeches". Gracellen Anderson read "If Paw Hadn't Married Maw". Juvenile girls of the Grange offered vocal numbers, and Margaret Ellen Reid played a piano solo.

A health program is being planned in connection with the bread and blouse contest for the next meeting.

Winners Named In Rose Show

Dr. W. L. Sprouse and Mack E. Noggle of Circleville, members of the Columbus Rose Club worked in conjunction with its members for the tenth annual show staged Sunday in that city.

H. H. Allen of Chillicothe, was the winner of the Ezra C. Anstaett Trophy for the best rose and the Fritz A. Lichtenberg Cup for the most points in the show.

Allen's Peace Rose was the top winner among 500 entries submitted by 59 contestants.

Other show leaders included Harold Weaver of Baltimore, for the best 10 roses of the show, and Mrs. Edward R. Ray of Lancaster, for the best arrangement.

H. H. Bach, 16, of Columbus, took the O. G. Mandt Cup for the best rose in the junior division for youths from 10 to 17.

What Every BRIDE Should Know

DIAMONDS, millions of years in the making, are the same basic carbon material as the coal we burn. Stoutsville Church Scene Of Wedding

The Rev. Frederick Dollefeld, pastor of Stoutsville Evangelical Reformed church, officiated for the open church wedding Saturday evening when Mrs. Leah Ann Bracey exchanged vows with Rex Milton Zollinger.

Altar of the church was draped for the 7:30 p. m. ceremony in white satin with two seven-branched candelabra in the background. Flanking the altar were five-branched candelabra, palms and baskets of Summer flowers.

The new Mrs. Zollinger is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Crites of Stoutsville. Her husband is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Tenny Zollinger of Millersport.

The bride chose for her wedding a turquoise bouffant floor length gown and a corresponding halo of net faced with flowers. She wore matching net mits and satin slippers, and carried a nosegay backed by a net ruffle of turquoise. Her only jewelry was a strand of pearls, a gift from the bridegroom.

Mrs. Charles Sharp of Millersport, who was a classmate of the bride's at Capital university, served as matron of honor. She was attired in a gown of pink tulle, designed on lines of that worn by the bride. She carried a colonial bouquet and used all pink accessories. Her pink net halo featured flowers.

Eugene Zollinger of Columbus was best man for his brother.

Seating the guests were Ralph and Harold Zollinger of Millersport, brothers of the bridegroom, Vaughn Crites of New Holland, brother of the bride, and Vaughn Lewis of Bowersville, brother-in-law of the bride.

The Stout instrumental trio of Lancaster presented a period of pre-nuptial selections. Vance Crites, vocalist, was accompanied by Mrs. Theodore L. Huston of Stoutsville.

The immediate families and members of the wedding party were invited to a reception in the home of the bride's parents.

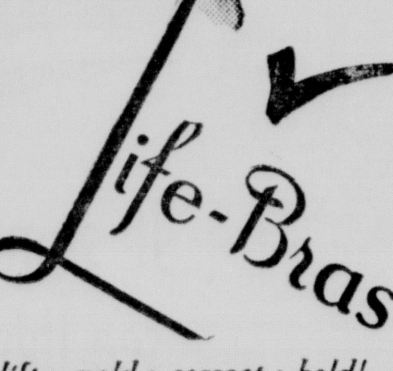

Refreshments were served from a lace covered table. Crystal candle holders and a center piece of rose buds and crepe myrtle were used for decorations.

Mrs. Crites chose for the occasion a turquoise crepe dress, black accessories and a rose bud corsage.

A yellow rose bud corsage was worn by Mrs. Zollinger, mother of the bridegroom, on her aqua crepe frock.

They plan to make their home in Millersport.

The Rev. Frederick Dollefeld, pastor of Stoutsville Evangelical Reformed church, officiated for the open church wedding Saturday evening when Mrs. Leah Ann Bracey exchanged vows with Rex Milton Zollinger.

Altar of the church was draped for the 7:30 p. m. ceremony in white satin with two seven-branched candelabra in the background. Flanking the altar were five-branched candelabra, palms and baskets of Summer flowers.

The new Mrs. Zollinger is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Crites of Stoutsville. Her husband is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Tenny Zollinger of Millersport.

The bride chose for her wedding a turquoise bouffant floor length faille gown and a corresponding halo of net faced with flowers. She wore matching net mits and satin slippers, and carried a nosegay backed by a red ruffle of turquoise. Her only jewelry was a strand of pearls, a gift from the bridegroom.

Mrs. Charles Sharp of Millersport, who was a classmate of the bride's at Capital University, served as matron of honor. She was attired in a gown of pink faille, designed on lines of that worn by the bride. She carried a colonial bouquet and used all pink accessories. Her pink net halo featured flowers.

Eugene Zollinger of Columbus was best man for his brother.

Seating the guests were Ralph and Harold Zollinger of Millersport, brothers of the bridegroom, Vaughn Crites of New Holland, brother of the bride, and Vaughn Lewis of Bowersville, brother-in-law of the bride.

The Stout instrumental trio of Lancaster presented a period of pre-nuptial selections. Vance Crites, vocalist, was accompanied by Mrs. Theodore L. Huston of Stoutsville.

The immediate families and members of the wedding party were invited to a reception in the home of the bride's parents. Refreshments were served from a lace covered table. Crystal candle holders and a center piece of rose buds and crepe myrtle were used for decorations.

Mrs. Crites chose for the occasion a turquoise crepe dress, black accessories and a rose bud corsage.

A yellow rose bud corsage was worn by Mrs. Zollinger, mother of the bridegroom, on her aqua crepe frock.

They plan to make their home in Millersport.

Four-Year-Old Lad Feted

Farmers Finding Low Producers

COLUMBUS, June 14—Production records kept on 2,392 Ohio dairy herds in April showed that 6,405 cows out of a total of 28,856 produced 40 or more pounds of butterfat during the month.

R. R. Starbuck, specialist in dairy husbandry, Ohio State university, claims the average production of all Ohio dairy cows is less than 200 pounds for a year so 22 percent of the cows on test produced twice as well as the state average.

Owners of the 2,392 herds sold 440 cows for beef during April because those cows did not produce enough milk or butterfat to pay for their keep. Starbuck claims one of the great benefits farmers get from herd improvement association memberships is the continuous audit of their herds so they can weed out low producers and in that way increase the average production of the rest of the herd.

This dairy specialist says milk production costs are now high and a few poor cows can take about all the profit out of a farmer's dairy enterprise. Feed and labor costs are so high that many dairymen in the U. S. and in Ohio have cut down the number of cows kept during the past three years.

STARBUCK CLAIMS that breeding, feeding, and management all affect the amount of milk produced by a dairy herd, but he declares it is almost impossible to make a profitable producer out of a heifer that comes from low producing ancestors.

A farmer has to feed a heifer for two years before having a chance to measure its productive ability so his chance of building up a good dairy herd is much better if he keeps heifers from only his best cows and uses good herd sires.

This specialist says excellent herd sires are available for any Ohio dairy herd if the owner will join one of the artificial dairy herd insemination associations. The associations own numbers of excellent bulls of all dairy breeds, and those bulls can be used as herd sires by any association member at less cost than the farmer can keep a bull of doubtful quality on his own farm.

County Angus Men Stage Field Day, Demonstration

About 350 persons turned out Saturday afternoon for an Angus Field Day sponsored by the Pickaway County Aberdeen Angus Breeders Association.

Held on Dean Godden's lush and sprawling farm on the banks of the Deercreek south of Williamsport, the field day was highlighted by a type demonstration, judging contests and a barbecue picnic.

The Angus boosters, who claim that the black Angus is now the leading beef animal in Pickaway County, were headed by J. B. McCorkle, secretary of the Ohio Angus Breeders Association, who handled the type demonstration.

McCorkle stated that 11 years ago, Ohio ranked 16th in U. S. Angus production. Today, he said, the state ranks sixth in the nation.

In his type demonstration, McCorkle used a senior yearling female and a two-year-old bull.

HE POINTED out what beef buyers want in the way of a finished beef animal. The female, McCorkle declared, should be "a lot of meat in a small package."

He said she should have short legs, be comparatively short between shoulders and hips. She should have a small, blocky head with a short neck.

The female must have femininity, smoothness, quality and type, he said.

A good beef bull, McCorkle said, must be massive and masculine. The bull must have heavier bone structure than the female, have full, covered shoulders and have short front legs which stand far apart.

McCorkle emphasized that beef buyers watch the hind quarters of an animal. They must be full, solid and broad. Buyers frown on a knobby tail area and "want no tail you can hang your hat on."

The state association secretary, assisted by Larry Best, Pickaway County agricultural agent, handled judging contests which featured three different grades of animals.

The individual junior judging contest was won by Neal Klamforth of Groveport who tallied 580 out of a possible 600 points. Second prize went to Richard Hinton of Commercial Point.

INDIVIDUAL senior judging contest was won by Denslow Eversole of Fairfield County who chalked up 585 points.

Team contest was won by three youths from Salt Creek Township: Carl Reichelderfer, 545 points; George Wadlington, 530; and David Luckhart, 505.

Second place was won by the Duval Go-Getters team comprised of Bill Courtwright, Bob Smith and Charles Hine.

One speaker during the afternoon was F. K. Blair, one-time county agent here, who now farms in Indiana.

Blair traced the growth of purebred beef growing in Pickaway County and declared that he is "amazed at the remarkable strides made here."

He stated that in 1935 a few boys in this area in the 12-15

year age limit wanted to start raising purebred beef animals. They started with some local stock and entered the Ohio State Fair. In a field of about 26 entries, highest local ranking was very near the last Blair recalled.

Undiscouraged, the local youths continued their efforts, Blair said, until today "it is safe to say that you do not need to go outside the county to buy good cattle."

Blair praised the county for its progress and declared that "good cattle and good people go together."

In the consumption of milk and milk products, the United States ranks 13th among the nations, according to Fred Bailey, executive director of the National Agricultural Research Inc.

INDIVIDUAL senior judging contest was won by Denslow Eversole of Fairfield County who chalked up 585 points.

Team contest was won by three youths from Salter Creek Township: Carl Reichelderfer, 545 points; George Wadlington, 530; and David Luckhart, 505.

Second place was won by the Duvall Go-Getters team comprised of Bill Courtwright, Bob Smith and Charles Hine.

One speaker during the afternoon was F. K. Blair, one-time county agent here, who now farms in Indiana.

Blair traced the growth of purebred beef growing in Pickaway County and declared that he is "amazed at the remarkable strides made here."

He stated that in 1935 a few boys in this area in the 12-15

year age limit wanted to start raising purebred beef animals. They started with some local stock and entered the Ohio State Fair. In a field of about 26 entries, highest local ranking was very near the last Blair recalled.

Undiscouraged, the local youths continued their efforts. Blair said, until today "it is safe to say that you do not need to go outside the county to buy good cattle."

Blair praised the county for its progress and declared that "good cattle and good people go together."

In the consumption of milk and milk products, the United States ranks 13th among the nations, according to Fred Bailey, executive director of the National Agricultural Research Inc.

Local Pupils To 16 Days Of Vacation

1948-49 School Calendar Set

Circleville-high school students will receive a total of 16 days off from their work during the next school year, which is slated to begin Sept. 9.

Their first relief from the five-day school grind will come in October, according to the school calendar approved by the Circleville board of education.

The vacation will consist of a day and a half starting Oct. 21 for the annual Pumpkin Show and another day a week later for teachers' attendance of the Ohio Education Association.

Next days off come in October, one day for Armistice Day observances and Thursday and Friday off for Thanksgiving.

Almost a month of solid work faces the students after Thanksgiving, but it is compensated by the fact they will receive eight days for their Christmas and New Years vacation, beginning on Dec. 22.

WASHINGTON'S Birthday nearly two months later will release the pupils for one day, and another two months will pass before their next vacation, for Easter, is observed.

Last time off before the end of the school year on June 3 is the Memorial Day celebration on May 30.

For those of the students who are statistically minded, they will spend 176 days in school, or exactly 11 times the amount of vacation they will be granted.

Ashville

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Reid and David, Columbus, visited Saturday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Malone and family.

Twenty-three members and guests of the Ashville Luther League spent Sunday at Tar Hollow State Park where they enjoyed a picnic dinner and winter roast. Softball and swimming completed the entertainment. Those who made the trip were Joanne Hinkle, Charles Eversole Jr., Jim Irwin, Jim Ward, Bob Glick, Lillian Franks, Greta McDonald, Jane Klopfenstein, James Klopfenstein, Ellen Hudson, Bob Shauck, David Kraft, Louise Swingle, Doran Topolosky, Charles Messick, Betty Badger, Bob Swoyer, Ronald Swoyer, Carolyn Courtwright, Bryan Grant, Elmer Malone Jr. and Mrs. and Mrs. Gene Tosca.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Griffith and Roy and Mrs. Fay Johnson, Lancaster, visited Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Malone and Mrs. Emma Griffith.

Bill Trego, winner of the Anti-Saloon League quiz contest, left Monday for a two-week all-expense-paid trip to Florida as guest of the League. Miss Mary Fudge, Dayton, formerly of Ashville, also won a trip in the same contest.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Graham, Jack and Jill, have removed from Columbus to Granville where Graham will operate a grocery. Mr. and Mrs. Graham formerly were Ashville residents and graduates of Ashville High School.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Irwin, Helen and Jack Irwin, and Miss Mary Ann Wolfe attended the wedding of Miss Faye Miller, Highland, and Carl Fogt, Anna, at Highland Methodist Church Sunday afternoon with the Rev. E. B. Wright officiating.

Roger Hedges, Walter Hedges, Howard Hedges, Chester Hedges and Bill Plum Jr. attended the handicap trap shoot Sunday at Vandalia where they turned in scores in the low 90s with Howard leading the local shooters with a 94. Earlier in the week, Howard Hedges led the Class D shooters with a 99 in the first 100 only to skid down to an 88 in the afternoon; 193 winning the event.

The eyes of the world turned to Athens Thursday and for a brief while the ancient Greek capital recovered some of its glory and splendor even though a destructive and bloody civil war is raging on its outskirts.

For despite all its war time austerity, poverty and need, the city beneath the Acropolis could not help but reflect at least a portion of the glitter that surrounded the wedding of Romania's exiled King Michael to Princess Anne of Bourbon-Parma.

Michael renounced his abdication and stood on his "rights" as a king to be married by Greek orthodox rites although Princess Anne is a Roman Catholic.

And the protocol of the wedding reads that as soon as the elaborate ceremonies were completed, Anne automatically became Queen Anne of Romania, a consort without throne or scepter but none the less full-blown royalty in its accepted meaning. Ostensibly, the wedding was an entirely private affair. There were no great peals of church bells, no brass bands, no glittering processions, no guided coaches or carapisoned horses.

THE CEREMONY took place in a private chapel of the royal palace in Athens and after a wedding luncheon, Michael and his pretty princess left quietly for King Paul's Summer villa at Tatoi in the countryside which he has loaned them for a honeymoon.

But despite every effort to keep things as simple as possible in contrast to the pageant of Princess Elizabeth's wedding to the Duke of Edinburgh in London a few months ago, there was a thrill of excitement in Athens's sombre streets.

The Athenians are romantic people and Greek orthodox weddings are colorful indeed. The people visualized Greek and other royalty in magnificent court dress and there were shiny limousines driving up to the palace with government officials, diplomatic envoys and other

WOODS FULL OF POSSIBILITIES

GOP Vice-President List Varied As Is Top Race

WASHINGTON, June 14—The woods are full today of dark horse possibilities for the Republican presidential nomination without a favorite among them.

The uncertainty over the identity of the Republican presidential nominee serves to increase the field of vice-presidential possibilities.

Political and geographical considerations will enter into the choice of a running-mate after the GOP standard-bearer is named.

If Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio is nominated, the second spot could go to an easterner, a middle westerner or a far westerner.

If Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York is named, his running-mate would probably come from the midwest or the far west.

If Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota wins the first place, his vice-presidential nominee would come from the east or far west, rather than the middle west.

IF GOV. WARREN of California is the convention's first choice, his running-mate could come from any other part of the nation but most likely from the east.

If Gen. Douglas MacArthur should win, an easterner or westerner would be favored for second place as his home state is Wisconsin.

The nomination of a "dark horse" for the presidency would bring political considerations into the picture. If one of the leading candidates fauted the nomination of a "dark horse," then that candidate would be consulted in the choice of a running-mate.

Thus if Taft's forces brought about the nomination of a "dark horse," the Ohio senator's recommendation undoubtedly would be followed in the naming of the vice-presidential nominee.

The same would apply to Dewey if his followers enabled a "dark horse" to win first place. If both groups agreed on a compromise nominee, both leaders would be consulted.

The vice-presidential possibilities linked to each potential winner are:

Taft: Gov. Warren or Sen. William F. Knowland of California; Stassen: Sen. Irving M. Ives or Rep. Leonard W. Hall of New York; Gov. Kim Sigler of Michigan.

DEWEY: Sen. John Bricker, (the 1944 team again) or Gov. Thomas J. Herbert of Ohio; Gov. Sigler of Michigan; Rep. Charles A. Halleck of Indiana; Sen. John S. Cooper of Kentucky; Sen. Eugene D. Millikin of Colorado. Stassen: Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll of New Jersey; Sen. Ives or Rep. Hall of New York; Gov. James H. Duff of Pennsylvania; Sen. Bricker or Gov. Herbert of Ohio.

Warren: Bricker or Herbert; Ives or Hall of New York; Duff of Pennsylvania, or Driscoll of New Jersey.

MacArthur: Almost any governor or member of Congress

Gregg Raps 3 Homers, Scoring 6

Ashville Tops Washington, 6-5

Jay Gregg of the Ashville Reds club turned on a Babe Ruth act for his team Sunday, blasting out three homeruns and batting in all six Ashville tallies in a 6-5 win over the Washington Eagles at Washington C. H.

Neither team could score in the first three innings of play, the Ashville string of zeroes being shattered in the fourth frame when Ashville's Belcher and Noon singled and Gregg poled a homer to score all three.

With a 3-0 lead, Ashville blanked Washington in its half the fourth canto, but was scoreless in the fifth while Washington pushed five markers across the plate to jump into a 5-3 lead.

The sixth inning was quiet, with neither team posting a mark. Gregg came to bat again in the seventh to blast out another homer to cut the lead to 5-4 in favor of the Washington squad.

In its half the seventh, the Eagles failed to score, and both teams went scoreless in the eighth.

IN THE FIRST of the ninth, with the score still at 5-4 for the Eagles, Ashville's Harper singled, and Gregg again came through with a four-sacker to give the Ashville aggregation the lead at 6-5. They maintained the advantage in the last of the ninth by blanking the Eagle crew.

In other league games, Chillicothe shut out Jamestown 12-0 to remain on top the South Central league, and Greenfield edged Grove City 9-7 to remain tied with Ashville in second place with three won and one lost.

Ashville's next contest will be Sunday when it plays host to Grove City in Community Park.

Following are the box score of Ashville-Washington game, scores of the other Sunday league tilts and league standings.

European Aces Set For Tests

CHICAGO, June 14—Two European champions—Italian Heavyweight Tiltist Enrico Bertola and Estonian Middleweight Anton Raadik—will see action tonight on the Margold Gardens card, which features three 10-round bouts.

Raadik, conqueror of Joe La Motta and George Abrams and near-victor over Marcel Cerdan, moves in against Tommy Bell of Youngstown.

In another 10-rounder Bertola, undefeated in three American starts, seeks his fourth straight at the expense of Art Swiden, Duquesne, Pa.

The third 10-scrap sends Omaha's fiery young 150 pounder Vince Foster against Leon Thompson, Evans, Ky.

Citation 'Tops' In Arcaro's Book

NEW YORK, June 14—Jockey Eddie Arcaro, who rode Citation to an eight-length victory in the $100,000-added Belmont Stakes Saturday, said today that the Calumet three-year-old is the greatest horse he ever has seen.

Citation added a batch of statistics to his already impressive collection. He tied the record of 2:28 1-5 for the mile and a half classic. He became the eighth horse in history to win the triple crown, consisting of the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont.

The colt's earnings for two season now total $544,700, more than any other thoroughbred ever has won at a similar stage in his career.

Redlegs To Eye Local Pitcher

Circleville high school baseball pitcher George Morris was to have travelled to Cincinnati Monday for a trial with the Cincinnati Reds. Morris was to have shown his wares to the Cincinnati manager and trainers, the ball club having gone to Brooklyn for a game Tuesday.

The trial is part of the Reds' program, which picks various outstanding pitchers for a showing, but will not employ any of them until they have been graduated.

Morris, son of Mrs. Don Morris of South Washington street, was a junior in Circleville high school during last season's play.

all tied for the "booby" prize with 61s, highest score in the contest.

Godoy-Richard Bout Awaited

COLUMBUS, June 14—Arturo Godoy, the aged South American, and Pat Richard, Columbus hopeful, square off tonight in a 10-round boxing bout here. Godoy won an earlier meeting last winter.

The South American, who once went 15 rounds with Joe Louis, will be an 8-to-5 favorite. He will have a 10-pound advantage, carrying 200 pounds to the younger ex-Marine's 190.

There'll be as much attention on the third man in the ring as the principals. Light Heavyweight Champion Gus Lesnevich is to referee the bout.

Carpenter-Hedges Duo Wins Match

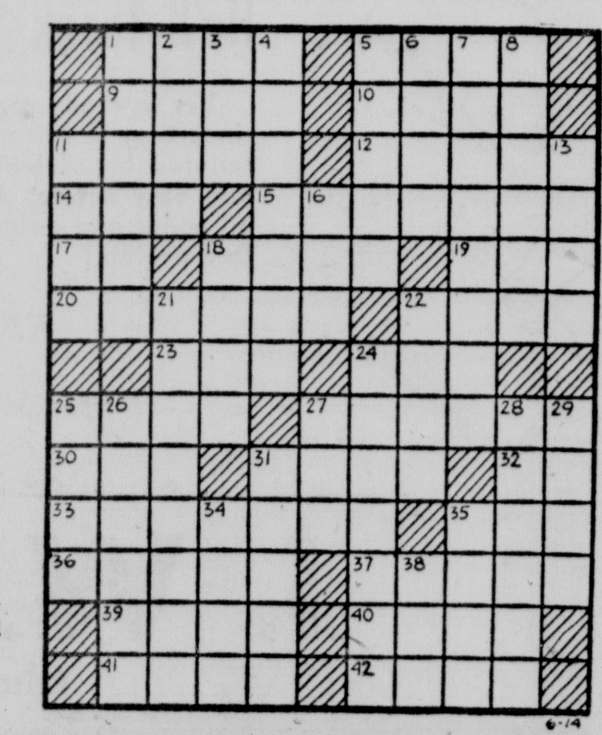

Mary Carpenter and Robert Hedges topped the field in the two-ball mixed foursome Sunday at Pickaway Country club with a low of 50 strokes for the nine holes. They received two golf balls each for winning the contest.

Receiving one golf ball each for runners-up were Martha Bowers and John Moore, who posted a 52 for their round. A sack of tees was awarded Erma Hedges, George Myers, Dorothy Wissler and William Goodchild.

Gregg Raps 3 Homers, Scoring 6

Ashville Tops Washington, 6-5

Jay Gregg of the Ashville Reds club turned on a Babe Ruth act for his team Sunday, blasting out three homers and batting in all six Ashville tallies in a 6-5 win over the Washington Eagles at Washington, C. H.

Neither team could score in the first three innings of play, the Ashville string of zeroes being shattered in the fourth frame when Ashville's Belcher and Noon singled and Gregg poled a homer to score all three.

With a 3-0 lead, Ashville blanked Washington in its half the fourth canto, but was scoreless in the fifth while Washington pushed five markers across the plate to jump into a 5-3 lead. The sixth inning was quiet, with neither team posting a mark. Gregg came to bat again in the seventh to blast out another homer to cut the lead to 5-4 in favor of the Washington squad.

In its half the seventh, the Eagles failed to score, and both teams went scoreless in the eighth.

IN THE FIRST of the ninth, with the score still at 5-4 for the Eagles, Ashville's Harper singled, and Gregg again came through with a four-sacker to give the Ashville aggregation the lead at 6-5. They maintained the advantage in the last of the ninth by blanking the Eagle crew.

In other league games, Chillicothe shut out Jamestown 12-0 to remain on top the South Central league, and Greenfield edged Grove City 9-7 to remain tied with Ashville in second place with three won and one lost.

Ashville's next contest will be Sunday when it plays host to Grove City in Community Park.

Following are the box score of Ashville-Washington game, scores of the other Sunday league tilts and league standings.
